MISSIONARY UPDATE

JON & AMIE CROSS
SIM, EAST AFRICA

Hi Alderwood, There is a nomadic tribe that travels through our area of South Sudan. They, prior to this update, are considered unreached. This is in large part because they are constantly on the move. Over two years ago, a team discovered their language was similar to another nomadic tribe in West Africa. This March a man from this tribe, Hakim*, was flown out to connect with the South Sudan tribe. They were able to converse and connect, and by evening Hakim was able to share the good news of God with them for the very first time. Through a translator, I listened to Hakim recount his family's journey into knowing God when he described a small leather cross they made. He said for years his people had considered this cross a sign of hope, but they did not know why until they heard the gospel. Since that first trip, Hakim has returned to South Sudan a second time, to continue sharing that message of hope with others. Because of his similar nomadic lifestyle, it is simpler for him to journey and understand this unreached tribe in ways that open doors for the good news of God and allow the global church the blessing of participating in God's work on a global scale. Alderwood, I think there are moments where the distance between heaven and earth seem a bit thinner, where we get glimpses of how big our God is and how much he cares. This story is one of them. What a beautiful picture of heaven, many people, and tribes coming together to worship one God. It is also a testimony to God's sovereignty that he would prepare a people group in West Africa to share the good news with a group in South Sudan, and he would use over five nationalities to help empower this to happen.

We celebrate these new believers with you Alderwood!
